interests include the diagnosis, epidemiology, and therapeutics of sporotrichosis and leishmaniasis.

References

Address for correspondence: Armando Schubach, Fundação Oswaldo Cruz, Instituto de Pesquisa Clinica Evandro Chagas, Serviço de Zoonoses, Av. Brasil 4365, CEP 21040-900 Rio de Janeiro, RJ, Brazil; fax: 55-21-3865-9541; email: armando@ipec.fiocruz.br

---

Etymology

Eptesicus fuscus

[ep’tes-ə-kəs fás-kəs]

The big brown bat. From the Greek epten, "I fly," plus oikos, "house," and the Latin fuscus, "dusk." A nocturnal, insectivorous bat, Eptesicus fuscus females separate after mating into maternity colonies that are frequently found in attics of buildings or other manmade locations, since they prefer warmer temperatures in which to raise their young.

Figure. Photograph courtesy of Ivan Kuzmin.