Manuscript Number (if known)

Article Summary Line: Concise (1 sentence) statement of results/implications for public health presented in the article (to catch the reader's interest).

Table of Contents Title: Full title of article.

Running Title: Brief phrase indicating article topic (no more than 50 characters)

Keywords: List of keywords. There is no limit on the number of keywords. Use terms listed in the Medical Subject Headings from Index Medicus.

Article Title

Authors:

Author affiliations:

Institution, city, state, country (First Initial. Last Name, First Initial. Last Name, ...)

Footnotes (if applicable); only use on title and author listings.

<sup>1</sup>Text of first footnote.

Abstract - word count

Abstracts should be 1 paragraph and not divided into sections. They should follow the general organization of problem or goal of study, methods, results, and conclusions/public health implications. Word limits: 150 for long-form articles (e.g., research articles, perspectives, synopses); 50 words for short-form articles (e.g., dispatches, research letters). Do not cite references in an abstract.

Text – word count (word counts are strictly enforced)

Text should be in Times New Roman 12-pt. font and left aligned with first line indented. Remove blank lines between paragraphs. Do not insert tables or figure legends within the body of the manuscript. All figures and tables, including appendix figures and tables, must be cited within the manuscript text.

Do not use Endnotes for citations. Place in-text citation as italic numbers (I) in parentheses. Do not use superscripts for in-text citations.

Acknowledgments

Paragraph listing persons or organizations you wish to acknowledge.

Paragraph listing funding provided for submitted research.

Optional: additional information deemed necessary by your institutions/funders, such as disclosures, disclaimers, and author contributions. Note that a disclaimer is not generally needed because EID journal publishes a CDC disclaimer.

About the Author (first author only, unless there are only 2 authors)

In 2–3 sentences, include author’s current position, affiliation, and primary research interests.

References

Do not use Endnotes for references. References should appear in a numbered list, in the order in which they are cited in the manuscript, including citations in figures and tables. Format the list in hanging indent paragraph style. Use Uniform Requirements citation style for authors and publications. List first 6 authors followed by “et al.” Reference limits are strictly enforced.

Place each row of data on its own individual row. Do not use spaces and tabs to create the look of a table. Table limits are strictly enforced; tables that exceed the limit must be removed or moved to an appendix. Large tables that exceed a 6.7” by 6.7” area will appear online only. Do not use vertical text.

Submit figures as .jpg or .tif files at 600 dots per inch resolution unless an editable version in its native format is available (e.g., flow chart in Word, graph built in Excel). When submitting Excel files, place the chart on the first tab and the linked data on the second tab. The chart should not exceed 1 page when printed. You may need to shrink the font, use landscape orientation, or simplify the data display (i.e., month, year only) for a long listing of dates. Do not use vertical text in a figure. Place figure keys within the figure. Define all abbreviations used in the figure in the legend.
